WHO WE ARE

Founded in 2020, Team Aero-Watt is a group of 15 ambitious engineering students from Heriot-Watt University in Edinburgh who design, test and manufacture autonomous unmanned aircraft systems (UAS). We compete in the IMechE's UAS Challenge, where last year we came 3rd, the highest placed new entrant, and we aim to continue our success. We aim to provide our team members with an insight into the aerospace industry whilst developing the skills and experience for a successful career in engineering.

UAS CHALLENGE 2022

The UAS Challenge is a global competition run by the IMechE which focuses on providing the opportunity to develop the next generation of engineers. Through a complete design and build cycle of an unmanned aerial system of maximum 10kg take off mass, students showcasing their skills by completing a number of missions in the fly-off competition in July.

OUR MISSION

We want to challenge ourselves, learn about the industry and increase interest in aerospace at Heriot-Watt University and local schools. Alongside this we are designing an innovative autonomous aircraft that competes in the IMechE's UAS Challenge and build connections across the industry.

PARTNERSHIPS

We really value the connections we have made with our sponsors. Creating strong relationships with industry partners is one of our goals and as such if you would like to collaborate with the team through funding or in-kind sponsorship we would love to hear from you and would appreciate the support. Together we can build a better future for aerospace.
